SEMPER Eadem, &c., "Always the same," was first used as the motto of the arms of England, December 13th, 1702.

DARWIN published his "Origin of Species" when fifty, and his "Descent of Man" when sixty-two.

CHARLES DICKENS considered waking the only remedy for sleeplessness, and was never happy without his accustomed walks.

The term Miser, which, we well know, signifies a man who makes his money his god, is derived from Miserii, i.e., Misery, or Miserable.

It was in 1634 that Sir Saunders Duncombe first introduced sedan-chairs. Sir Saunders was a great traveller, and had seen these chairs at Sedan, where they were first invented.

MADDEN, in his curious work on "The Infirmitates of Genius," gives a list of two hundred and forty illustrious names, with their ages at death, the average being about sixty-six years.

M. d'USEZ was gentleman of honour to Maria Theresa. The Empress one day asked him what the time was. He replied, "Madam, any hour your Majesty pleases."

ON POPE'S DEATH.

*"Arise, ye glimmering stars of wit!
For, lo! the sun of Verse is set."*

CICERO calls memory the treasury of the sciences. Montaigne terms memory the strong box of science.

It has been said that Churchill had the courage to write what others had not the courage to think.

ROUSSEAU, it is said, when dying ordered his attendants to place him before the window, that he might once more behold the setting sun and take his farewell of earth.

MILITARY uniforms were first introduced by Louis XIV., and immediately after by the English.

The Princess Ann of Bohemia was the first who introduced side-saddles into England. It was in the year 1399; prior to which ladies either rode on pillion, or astride like men.

MILLINERS are so called because the Milanese were the first Milliners, or, as they were called, Milaners; deriving their name from the sale of a particular dress first worn at Milan, in Italy.

SENeca could repeat two thousand names in the order they were spoken, and rehearse two hundred verses after once hearing them read.

MACKLIN disputing with Dr. Johnson on a literary subject, the latter quoted Greek. "I do not understand Greek," said Macklin. "A man who argues should understand every language," replied Johnson. "Very well," said Macklin, and he gave him a quotation in Irish.

LIVING AND DEAD.

*"Seven wealthy towns contend for Homer dead,
Thro' which the living Homer begged his bread!"*

AN entry in Sir Rowland Hill's journal reads—"I walked to Stowbridge once a week to give a lesson. This I could do without the least fatigue, as it is only twelve miles hence, and I have often walked thirty miles in one day."

THE ANTIQUARY.

*"Give me the thing that's pretty,
odd, and new:
All ugly, old, odd things—I leave to you."*

WILLIAM HUTTON, of Birmingham, believed that as soon as he ceased to walk he would die. When, in his ninety-second year, he felt death was drawing nigh, he exclaimed, "I am got to my last; I cannot walk another step."

When Claude Lorraine, who, it is well known, was not celebrated for painting figures, disposed of his pictures, he used to say to the purchasers, "I sell you the landscape; but, mind, I give you the figures."

The following great names are enlisted in dislike of matrimony:—Newton, Locke, Boyle, Gibbon, Hume, Adam Smith, Harvey, Leibnitz, Bayle, Hobbes, Hampden, Sir F. Drake, Earl of Essex, Pitt, Michael Angelo, the three Caracci's, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Haydn, Handel, Wolsey, Pascal, Fenelon, De Henry, Pope, Akenside, Swift, Goldsmith, Gray, Collins, Thomson, and Jeremy Bentham. Among the ancients we find nearly all their great philosophers—Plato, Pythagoras, Epicurus, Bion, Anaxagoras, Heraclitus, Democritus, and Diogenes.

The first will of a sovereign of England on record is that of Richard II., in 1399. There is little doubt that wills originated with the Egyptians, although not used in Europe until ages after.

When Paley was asked why he always kept his horse three miles off, he replied—"For exercise." "But you never ride." "That is the reason why I keep him at such a distance, for I get all the exercise out of the walk."

HOBBES once said to a notorious bookworm, "If I had read as many volumes as you have done, I should have been as ignorant as you are."

LOUIS XIV. once showed Boileau some verses he had composed, asking his opinion on them. "Sire," replied the poet, "clearly nothing is impossible to your Majesty; the King has tried to put together a few wretched verses, and he has been successful."

DR. JOHNSON, in noticing the MSS. of Milton, preserved at Cambridge, has made, with his usual force of language, the following observation: "Such reliques show how excellence is acquired; what we hope ever to do with ease, we may learn first to do with diligence."

SIR THOMAS MORE did not forego his love of jest, even when mounting the scaffold. The stout-hearted knight, it appears, disturbed the oppressive solemnity of the scene by exclaiming with an air of good-humour—"I pray you see me safe up, and for my coming down let me shift for myself."

TIME TO THOMAS HEARNE.

*"My stars!" quoth Time to Thomas Hearne,
"Whatever I forget you learn."*

Hearne's Answer.

*"Just so," quoth Hearne, in furious fret,
"Whate'er I learn you soon forget."*

AN admission-fee at St. Paul's Cathedral was first introduced under the name of Stairs-foot money, by Jennings, the carpenter, in 1707, the proceeds being applied to relieve those men who were injured during the progress of the works.

"NOTHING IS GOOD BUT IN ITS SEASON."

MISS MARIA LINLEY expired at Bath, in September, 1784, whilst singing, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

BACON says, "Certainly the best works and of greatest merit for the public have proceeded from unmarried or childless men."

VOLTAIRE, speaking of law, says, "I never was but twice in my life completely on the verge of ruin: first, when I lost a law-suit; and secondly, when I gained one."

JOHN DALTON, the discoverer of the atomic theory, was an indefatigable walker. He made the ascent of the Cumberland mountains thirty or forty times on foot.

BYRON, in spite of his deformity, excelled in feats of strength, and he prided himself as much on having swum the Hellespont as on having written "Childe Harold."

MOORE says that the most illustrious poets, almost without exception, have been restless and solitary spirits, with minds wrapped up, like silkworms, in their own tasks, either strangers or rebels to the domestic tie.

GEORGE SAND preferred to work far into the night, so that she might have more hours of daylight for her walks in the country.

ON DRYDEN.

*"Dryden, in immortal strain,
Had raised the table-round again,
But that a ribald king and court
Bade him toil on, to make them sport;
Demanded for their niggard pay,
Fit for their souls, a looser law,
Licentious satires, song and play:
The world defrauded of the high design,
Profaned the God-given strength,
and marred the lofty line."*
SCOTT.

COWPER was over fifty when he published "John Gilpin" and "The Task," and Defoe fifty-eight when he published "Robinson Crusoe."

HUMBOLDT prepared himself for his explorations by systematic exercise to the point of fatigue.

TROPHRASTUS, noticing someone who never opened his lips in company, went up to him and said, "If you are a clever man you are wrong; if not, then you are a clever man."

SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON at the age of seventy walked twenty miles without fatigue in five hours.

COUNT MAZARIN kept a complete collection of the liels w^h ten against him: it amounted to forty-six quarto volumes.

PEG WOFFINGTON, acting Rosalind (May 3rd, 1757), became paralysed on uttering the words in the epilogue—"I'd kiss as many of you as had beards that pleased me."

MILTON was certainly more than fifty-four when he began to compose his "Paradise Lost." He was fifty-nine when he sold it to Simmons, the bookseller.

THE following distinguished men, though married, were unhappy in that state:—Aristotle, Socrates, Pittacus, Periander, Euripides, and Aristophanes. Among the moderns:—Boccaccio, Dante, Milton, Steele, Addison, Dryden, Molière, Racine, Sterne, Garriek, and Lord Bacon.

ALE and alehouses in England are made mention of in the laws of Iba, King of Wessex. Licences were introduced in 1551.

GAY'S EPITAPH.

*"Life's a jest, and all things show it;
I thought so once, and now I know it."*

EPITAPH FOR ROBESPIERRE.

"Here lies Robespierre—let no tear be shed Reader, if he had lived, thou hadst been dead."

TENNYSON was fifty when his idyls, "Elaïne," "Yvrien," and "Guinevere" were published, and was about sixty-two when he completed the series with "Gareth and Lynette."

THE few original books in our day remind one of the Frenchman in the "Adventurer," who was about to compile a treatise "concerning things that had been said but once;" which, he remarked, would be contained in a very small pamphlet.

BOSWELL observing to Johnson that there was no instance of a beggar dying for want in the streets of Scotland, "I believe, sir, you are very right," says Johnson; "but this does not arise from the want of beggars, but the impossibility of starving a Scotsman."

EDMUND KEAN may be said to have died in armour. He appeared for the last time as Othello; and in the passage beginning "Oh, now, for ever, farewell the tranquil mind! Farewell content!" his articulation gradually died away, and he whispered to his son—"Speak to them, Charles; I am dying."

CARLYLE was forty-two when he published the "French Revolution," the first work to which he formally put his name. His "Cromwell" was published when he was fifty.

MAIL-COACHES were first established to Bristol, in 1784; to other parts of England, and an Act to regulate and encourage them, and exempt them from tolls, in 1785.

DIAMONDS were first cut and polished at Bruges, in 1489. Diamond mines discovered at Golconda, 1584; at Coujour, 1640; and at Brazil, 1730.

WHEN Walpole began to plant the grounds at Strawberry Hill, he used to talk very learnedly with the nurseryman, except that now and then a lettuce run to seed over-turned all his botany, as he more than once took it for a curious West Indian flowering shrub.

THE scholars of Muretus sometimes made a noise, and interrupted him. As his temper was rather violent, he used to reprove them occasionally with violence, and kept them in awe. One day during the lecture, one of them rang a bell which he had brought in his pocket, "Truly," said Muretus, "I should have been astonished if, among such a flock of sheep, there had not been a bell-wether to lead the rest."

IN A GARDEN.

The following lines to his garden are by Andrew Marvell, the celebrated "Parliament man":—

*"Fair quiet! have I found you here?
And innocence your sister, dear?
Mistaken long I sought you, then,
In busy companies of men—
Society is all but rude
To this delicious solitude."*

He who accepted wages from his constituents at Hull (and he was the last representative who was literally a servant to the people), who borrowed a guinea immediately after he had refused £1,000 of Lord Treasurer Danby, had, probably, a garden for meditation, and not for show.

MACAULAY was forty-eight when he issued the first and the second volume of his "History of England," and the third and fourth did not appear until he was fifty-five. Good as are the Essays of his early manhood, they pale when compared with his work of maturer years.

NOTES TO THE CALENDAR.

"The greatest part of mankind employ their first years to make their last miserable."—BRUYÈRE.

1.—On the 1st of January, 1308, William Tell, the Swiss patriot, associated himself with a band of his countrymen against the tyranny of their oppressors. For upwards of three centuries the opposition was carried on, and terminated by the Treaty of Westphalia in 1648, declaring the independence of Switzerland.

2.—The celebrated physiognomist, J. C. Lavater, died on this day in 1801, at the age of sixty, in consequence of a wound received from a French soldier. His work on Physiognomy, when first published, made such an impression upon people's minds, that a servant could hardly obtain a situation without the lines and features of his countenance first undergoing a comparison with the engravings of the above work.

3.—The famous Law was appointed Comptroller-General of the French Finances on the 6th of January, 1718. He was the contriver of the memorable scheme called the Mississippi Bubble, which burst in 1720, and involved thousands in ruin, after having extended to £100,000,000 sterling. Law was a native of Lausanne, in the neighbourhood of Edinburgh.

Barnaby Googe observes of this day:—

"The Wise Men's day here followeth, who out of Persia farre, Brought gifts and presents unto Christ, conducted by a starre."

13.—The festival of St. Hilary is not observed by the Romish Church until to-morrow, but it stands in old calendars, and in Randle Holmes's "Heraldry," on this day, whereon it is also placed in the English calendar.

Butler says St. Hilary was born at Poitiers, became bishop of that city, was a commentator on Scripture, an orator, a poet, wrote against the Arians, was banished for his orthodoxy, but returned to his see, worked miracles, and died on the 13th of January, 368.

18.—On Corelli's personal character all writers agree in bestowing the highest praise. His disposition was mild and gentle, and his life exemplary. He appears to have been modest and sensitive, even to a fault; a portion of that firmness and self-possession, which ought to be produced by a consciousness of talent, would have prevented the cloud which settled upon his latter days.

The mildness of his temper, however, did not hinder him sometimes, when he felt it necessary, from vindicating the respect due to himself and his art. When he was performing a solo, on one occasion, at Cardinal Ottoboni's, he observed the cardinal and another person engaged in talking; on which he laid down his instrument, and, being asked the reason, replied that "he feared his music interrupted the conversation."

20.—David Garrick occupies the honourable position of the most

WORDS OF THE WISE.

TIME effaces everything.

WE have all strength enough to endure the troubles of other people.

PEOPLE who never have any time are the people who do least.

HEALTH is—like children—spoilt by too much care.

BE slow in giving advice, ready to perform a service.

THE mind ought sometimes to be diverted, that it may return the better to thinking.

"Man is the creature of circumstances."—OWEN.

perfect and accomplished actor of the English stage. He was also a successful dramatist, and a poet of no mean pretensions. Many of his poems possess great sweetness, both of fancy and versification.

One of the numerous anecdotes told of the English Roscius is the following, which speaks much for his benevolence—not, by the way, the side of his character that struck his contemporaries most. Mr. Garrick was very intimate with an eminent surgeon who frequently visited him. Upon one occasion the surgeon declared to the actor, in the presence of Mrs. Garrick, that without the assistance of a friend who would lend him a thousand pounds he should be at a loss what to do.

"A thousand pounds?" said Mr. Garrick. "That is a very large sum. Well, now, pray what security can you give for the money?"

"No other than my own," said the Roscius, turning to Mrs. G.; "he wants to borrow a thousand pounds, and upon his personal security. Well, come, I'll tell you one thing for your comfort. I think I know a man that will lend you a thousand pounds."

He immediately wrote a cheque for the amount and presented it to his friend. Mr. Garrick never asked for, or received, a shilling of it.

23.—The first lottery drawn in England consisted of forty thousand lots at ten shillings each lot. The prizes were plate, and the profits were to go towards repairing the several heavens of the kingdom. It was drawn at the west door of St. Paul's Cathedral. The drawing began on the 23rd of January, 1569, and continued until the 12th of May following. There were only three lottery offices in London. The proposals for this lottery were published in the years 1567 and 1568.

24.—"Ah!" cried Rabelais, with an honest pride, as his friends were weeping around his death-bed. "If I were to die ten times over I should never make you cry half so much as I have made you laugh."

25.—On this day, in 1725, died Peter the Great of Russia, to whom that empire is indebted for much of its present power and its progress in arts and civilisation. The character of this extraordinary man was well given by himself when, in an excess of passion and inebriety, he drew his sword on his favourite, Le Fort, by whose counsels many of his improvements were accomplished. Ashamed of his conduct, he asked his pardon, saying, "I have reformed my country, but I have not been able to reform myself."

THE RIDDLE OF THE YEAR.

BY CLEOBULUS.

There is a father with twice six sons; these sons have thirty daughters apiece, partly-coloured—having one cheek white and the other black—who never see each other's face, nor live above twenty-four hours.

Cleobulus, to whom this riddle is attributed, was one of the seven wise men of Greece, who lived about 570 years before the birth of Christ.

FOR eccentricity few Englishmen of position have ever equalled William Beckford, the author of the singular "History of the Caliph Vathek," which has taken its place among works of richly luxuriant imagination.

He was born in 1761, and at an early age succeeded, by the death of his father, to immense wealth. After travelling abroad and residing for some time near Cintra, where he had a princely establishment, he returned to England, and, after selling his old house at Fonthill, began to build a magnificent residence there, the expenditure on which, spread over eighteen years, was not less than £273,000.

He pursued the objects of his wishes, whatever they were, not coolly and considerably like most other men, but with all the enthusiasm of passion. No sooner did he decide upon anything than he had it carried into immediate execution, whatever might be the cost. After the new house was commenced, he was so impatient to get it finished that he kept regular relays of men at work night and day, including Sundays, supplying them liberally with ale and spirits while they were at work, and when anything was completed which gave him particular pleasure, adding an extra five pounds or ten pounds to be spent in drink.

The first tower, of immense height, was built of wood in order to see its effect; this was then taken down, and the same form put up in wood covered with cement. This fell down, and the tower was built a third time, on the same foundation, with brick and stone. The foundation of the tower was originally that of a small summer-house, to which Mr. Beckford was making additions when the idea of the new building occurred to him, and this idea he was so impatient to realise that he could not wait to remove the summer-house to make a proper foundation for the tower, but carried it up on the walls already standing.

The extraordinary residence erected at Fonthill, together with its splendid library and paintings, he disposed of in 1822 to a Mr. Farquhar. He went then to live near Bath, where he began to build another lofty structure, and here he lived till his death, in 1844.

Not long after he went to Bath the great tower of Fonthill Abbey came tumbling to the ground, fortunately without doing serious injury to anyone. When Mr. Beckford was told of it, he merely observed that it had made an obeisance to Mr. Farquhar which it had never done to him.

There is no doubt that Mr. Beckford's enjoyments consisted of a series of violent impulses. When he wished a new walk to be cut in the woods, or any work of that kind to be done, he used to say nothing about it in the way of preparation, but merely give orders, perhaps late in the afternoon, that it should be cleared out and in a perfect state by the following morning at the time he came out to take his ride. The whole strength of the village was then put in requisition, and employed during the night; and the next day, when Mr. Beckford came to inspect what was done, if he was pleased with it, he used to give a five-pound or a ten-pound note to the men who had been employed, to drink, besides of course paying their wages, which were always liberal.

Even his charities were performed in the same manner. Suddenly he would order a hundred pairs of blankets to be purchased and given away, or he would give orders to have all the first cut out of an extensive plantation, and all the poor who chose to take them away were permitted to do so, provided it were done in one night. He was also known suddenly to order all the wagons and carts that could be procured to be sent off for coal to be distributed among the poor.

He seldom rode out beyond his gates, but when he did, was

WORDS OF THE WISE.

THE better part of valour is discretion.

WE attract hearts by the qualities we display; we retain them by the qualities we possess.

FLIES spy out the wounds, bees the flowers; so do good men the merits, and common men the faults.

A QUARREL is like a squirt of water issuing from a cleft; wider and wider grows the cleft, more and more powerful the squirt.

EVERY ass loves to hear himself bray.

TIME and patience have often cured what reason could not.

THE double reward of kind words is the happiness they cause in others and the happiness they cause in ourselves.

EDUCATION does not mean teaching people to know what they do not know; it means teaching them to behave as they do not behave.

NOTES TO THE CALENDAR.

"A few more rapidly rolling years, flowing past like a river, vanishing like a dream, youth will be gone, and the world will look elsewhere, and reject those who have not already learnt to reject it. Let us, then, love that eternal beauty which never grows old, and which endows its lovers with perpetual youth."

2.—This is the Feast of the Purification. "The custom of lighting up candles in churches," says Foster, "on the Feast of the Purification is very ancient; and it seems that an imaginary power over the elements was by superstitious people ascribed to those waxen tapers, similar to that which some of the early Greeks and Romans attributed to torches."

The Romans of old are well known to have carried about candles and torches in processions in honour of Februa, a rite which coincides as to time of year with the festival of Candlemas.

A paraphrase of Barnaby Googe's on some Latin lines by Nargeorgus, says—

"Whose candelle burneth cleere and bright, a wondrous force and might

*Doth in these candells lie, which, if at any time they light,
They sure believe that neither storme or tempest dare abide,
Nor thunder in the skie be heard,
Nor any diuel spide,
Nor fearful sprites that walk by night,
nor hurt by frost and haille.*"

6.—The chief aim of Charles II. seems to have been to support without trouble or censure his own gay and dissipated life. Being affable and witty, and free from all vindictiveness, he enjoyed a good deal of popularity if nothing of respect. The following epigram was suggested as an appropriate epitaph for his tomb:—

"*Here lies our mutton-eating king,
Whose word no man relies on;
He never said a foolish thing,
He never did a wise one.*"

9.—This is Collop Monday. Collop Monday is the Monday preceding Shrove Tuesday, and was so termed because it was the last day of eating meat before Lent. In the North of England and many other parts of the kingdom, it was at one time usual for dinner fare to have eggs and collops, collops being meat cut into steaks for salting, and hung up to keep.

11.—According to the Benedictine rule, on Ash Wednesday, after sext, the monks were to return to the cloister to converse; but, at the ringing of a bell, be instantly silent. They were to unshoe themselves, wash their hands, and go to church, and make one common prayer. Then was to follow a religious service; after which the priest, having consecrated the ashes, and sprinkled holy water on them, was to throw them on the heads of the monks, saying, "Remember that you are but dust, and to dust must return." Then "the procession" was to follow.

14.—The rites of St. Valentine's Day remind us of the old custom of guessing sweethearts and of drawing lots for girls, a practice reprobated by St. Francis of Sales, who was aware that Valentine customs originated in the rites instituted in honour of Hymen and of Februario Juno by the Romans. Herrick, the most playful of poets, addressed to his mistress the following billet-doux:—

*"Choose me your Valentine,
Next let us marry;
Love to the death will pine
If we longer tarry.*

*"Promise and keep your vows,
Or now ye never;
Love's doctrine disallows
Trotth-breakers ever.*

*"You have broke promise twice,
Deare, to undoe me;
If you prove faithless thrice,
None then will wooe ye."*

15.—All his life Lamb had a look that attracted attention. In the first year of his clerkship, we are told by his friend Le Grice, he spent the evening of the 5th of November with some of his old schoolfellows of Christ's Hospital. They, being amused with the particularly large and flapping brim of his round hat, plinned it up on the sides like a cocked-hat.

With his head-gear thus improved, Lamb sauntered home towards the Temple. As he was going down Ludgate Hill some gay young men exclaimed, "The veritable Guy!—no man of straw!"—and with these words they took him up, making a chair of their arms, carried him to a post in St. Paul's Churchyard, seated him on the post, and there left him.

26.—The names of Byron and Moore are associated for their attainments; they were kindred in their friendship. The last lines written by Lord Byron on his native soil were addressed to Mr. Moore:—

*"My boat is on the shore,
And my bark is on the sea,
But ere I go, TOM MOORE,
Here's a double health to thee.*

*"Here's a sigh for those I love,
And a smile for those I hate,
And, whatever sky's above,
Here's a heart for any fate.*

*"Though the ocean roars around me,
It shall bear me on;
Though a desert should surround me,
It hath springs that may be won.*

*"Were it the last drop in the well,
As I gasped on the brink,
Ere my fainting spirits fell,
'Tis to thee that I would drink.*

*"In that water, as this wine,
The libation I would pour
Should be—Peace to thee and thine,
And a health to thee, TOM MOORE."*

23.—In literature Lamartine occupied a sort of half-way house between the 18th century and the Romantic movement. When some one asked St. Beuve about the importance of Lamartine, the answer of the critic was, "He is important to us" and it was a true answer; but his importance is now mainly historical, even to Frenchmen.

generally asked for charity by the poor people. Sometimes he used to throw a one-pound note or a guinea to them, and sometimes he used to turn round and give the suppliants a severe horsewhipping. When the last was the case, soon after he had ridden away, he generally sent back a guinea or two to the party who had been beaten.

In his mode of life Mr. Beckford had many singularities. Though he never had any society, yet he had his table covered every day in the most splendid style. He was known to give orders for a dinner for twelve persons, and to sit down alone to it attended by twelve servants in full dress, eat of one dish, and send all the rest away.

There were no bells in the house, with the exception of one room, occupied occasionally by his daughter, the Duchess of Hamilton. The servants used to wait by turns in the ante-rooms to the rooms which Mr. Beckford might occupy at the time.

Mr. Frith, in his "Reminiscences," gives a curious story of an adventure which happened to a cousin of his who entered the sacred domain of Mr. Beckford by stealth. He went into the gardens, where he met a man who he supposed was the gardener, but who proved to be Mr. Beckford himself. Mr. Beckford not only showed him his pictures, but kindly asked him to dinner, and then turned him out to spend the night—in a tree.

"The dinner was magnificent," says Mr. Frith, "served on massive plates—the wines of the rarest vintage. Rarer still was Mr. Beckford's conversation. He entertained his guest with stories of Italian travel, with anecdotes of the great in whose society he had mixed till he found the shallowness of it; in short, with the outpouring of a mind of great power and thorough cultivation. My cousin was well read enough to be able to appreciate the conversation, and contribute to it, and thus the evening passed delightfully away. Candles were lighted, and the host and guest talked till a fine Louis Quatorze clock struck eleven. Mr. Beckford rose and left the room. The guest drew his chair to the fire, and waited the return of his host. He thought he must have dozed, for he started to find the room in semi-darkness, and one of the solemn powdered footmen putting out the lights.

"Where is Mr. Beckford?" said my cousin.

"Mr. Beckford has gone to bed," said the man, as he extinguished the last candle.

"The dining-room door was open, and there was a dim light in the hall.

"This is very strange," said my cousin. "I expected Mr. Beckford back again. I wished to thank him for his hospitality." This was said as the guest followed the footman to the front door.

"That functionary opened it wide, and said, 'Mr. Beckford ordered me to present his compliments to you, sir, and I am to say that as you found your way into Ponthill Abbey without assistance, you may find your way out again as best you can; and he hopes you will take care to avoid the bloodhounds that are let loose in the gardens every night. I wish you good evening. No, thank you, sir; Mr. Beckford never allows vails.'

As an author Mr. Beckford is chiefly remembered by his romance of "Vathek," which was published in French at Lausanne in 1787. The English edition, issued in 1786, was a translation not made by the author, nor by his consent.

Lord Byron, a very competent judge both of the subject and the way in which it should be treated, praises "Vathek" in the highest terms. "For correctness of costume," he says, "beauty of description, and power of imagination, this most Eastern and sublime tale surpasses all European imitations, and bears such marks of originality that those who have visited the East will have some difficulty in believing it to be more than a translation. . . . As an Eastern tale even Rasselas must bow to it; his Happy Valley will not bear a comparison with the Hall of Eblis."

NOTES TO THE CALENDAR.

"Weak and irresolute is man;
The purpose of to-day,
Woven with pains into his plan,
To-morrow rends away."
COWPER.

8.—The fourth Sunday in Lent, and midway between Quadragesima and Easter Sunday, was formerly sometimes called "Mothering Sunday," from an ancient usage of visiting the mother or cathedral churches of the dioceses, when volunteer offerings were made by the parishioners, which, by degrees, were settled into an annual composition, and gave rise to what is now termed Easter offerings.

10.—On this day in 1863 the Prince of Wales married the Princess Alexandra, the eldest daughter of the King of Denmark. It was on this occasion that the Poet Laureate wrote the well-known words of welcome:—

"Sea-King's daughter, as happy as fair,
Blissful bride of a blissful heir,
Bride of the heir of the Kings of the Sea,
O, joy to the people and joy to the throne,
Come to us, love us, and make us your own!
For Saxon, or Dane, or Norman we,
Teuton, or Celt, or whatever we be,
We are each all Dane in our welcome of thee,
Alexandra!"

11.—On the 11th of March, 1752, papers were affixed in the avenues to both Houses of Parliament, giving notice that the farmers and their servants intended to destroy the pheasant and partridge eggs, and leverets, if the country gentlemen, who had entered into an association for the preservation of game, did not desist. There were sad heats at this time between the owners and occupiers of land, from the obnoxiousness of the Game Laws, and the severity of their execution.

17.—This being the anniversary of the day whereon St. Patrick died, it is celebrated to his honour in Ireland with every demonstration of affection for his memory as the apostle and patron saint of that country that a warm-hearted and enthusiastic people can possibly express.

An eye-witness, writing in the early part of this century, speaks of St. Patrick's Day in Dublin as being a scene of festivity and mirth unequalled by anything observable in Great Britain. From the highest to the lowest, all hearts seem inspired by the saint's beneficence. At day-break flags flew on the steeples, and the bells rang out incessant peals till midnight. The rich bestowed their benevolence on the poor, and the poor bestowed their blessings on the rich, and on each other, and on the blessed St. Patrick. The "green immortal" shamrock was in every hat. Sports of many exercises exhibited the capabilities of the celebrated "shillelagh," and before night many a head gave token of the application of its wonderful

WORDS OF THE WISE.

EVERYTHING leaves us or we leave everything.

How small is earth to him who views it from the skies!

No greater comfort than to know much; no less labour than to say little.

MARRIAGE is a feast where the grace is sometimes better than the dinner.

THE highest and most profitable reading is the true knowledge and consideration of ourselves.

A MASTERLY CRITIC.

"To err is human."—POPE.

Even as late as his eighteenth year he read with difficulty; and when, a few years later, he began to compose verses, the writing of them out, as he sat on the hillside surrounded by his flock, was a Herculean and painful process, for which he prepared himself by taking off both coat and vest!

27.—Horace died somewhat suddenly within a few weeks of the death of Mæcenæ, his great friend and patron, thus oddly enough confirming the declaration made by him in one of his Odes. Though not an old man the poet had reached the full maturity of his faculties, and fully accomplished the work he was fitted to do in the world. No ancient writer is better known. We know his tastes and habits from his own works, as we know the character and manner of Dr. Johnson from the pages of Boswell.

28.—Anthony Wood was the author of the "History and Antiquities of the University of Oxford." He likewise wrote a history of all the learned men educated in the University of Oxford, from the year 1500 to the end of 1690, a work begun, carried on and finished with incredible industry. Our author was framed by nature for the study of English history and antiquities, and it was that study which he prosecuted with unbounded perseverance. He was free from ambition, and was a signal instance of self-denial.

30.—When the country was alarmed by the expected invasion of England by Bonaparte, George III. wrote, November 30th, 1803, to Bishop Hurd, who was highly esteemed by the King:—

"We are here in daily expectation that Bonaparte will attempt his threatened invasion. The chances against his success seem so many, that it is wonderful he persists in it. I own I place that thorough dependence on the protection of Divine Providence that I cannot help thinking the usurper is encouraged to make the trial that the ill-success may put an end to his wicked purposes. Should his troops effect a landing, I shall certainly put myself at the head of mine, and mine other armed subjects, to repel them.

"But as it is impossible to foresee the events of such a conflict, should the enemy approach too near to Windsor, I shall think it right the Queen and my daughters should cross the Severn, and shall send them to your episcopal palace at Worcester. By this hint I do not in the least mean that they shall be any inconvenience to you, and shall send a proper servant and furniture for their accommodation. Should this event arise, I certainly would rather have what I value most in life remain, during the conflict, in your diocese, and under your roof, than in any other place in the island."

*"Softly the leaves are falling,
As they have fallen before,
And the sad old crows are calling
In the cold wet winds once more,
And already the nation is bawling,
'Shut the door!'"*

OF all the critics who flourished during the first half of this century, no one was listened to with more respect than Francis Jeffrey. "He was a remarkable instance," says one writer, "of the combination of different and dissimilar faculties, as well as of indefatigable energy and rapid versatility in the employment of mental powers."

He was born at Edinburgh on the 3rd of October, 1773. The early part of his education was received in the High School of his native city. He was then sent to the University of Glasgow in 1787, and was removed in 1791 to Queen's College, Oxford.

In 1794 he was admitted an advocate at the Scottish Bar, where he soon became distinguished for the vigour of his eloquence and the wit and boldness of his invective. He attended debating clubs; spoke with readiness and knowledge; and, with no other introduction than his own talents, formed the acquaintance, at the Speculative Society, of Sir Walter Scott, then a young man busy with his "Minstrelsy," and of the Rev. Sydney Smith and Brougham, both ardent for distinction in the Church and at the Bar.

Acquaintanceship soon ripened into intimacy; and at a late supper after a debate at the Speculative Society, the Edinburgh Review was projected by Smith, and approved of by Jeffrey and Brougham. Assistants were soon found; and in October, 1802, appeared the first number of the new periodical, under the editorial care of Sydney Smith—its original projector, as he is called by Lord Jeffrey—"and long," he adds, "its brightest ornament."

The success of the new Review was beyond the expectation of its founders, and after a few numbers, beyond all precedent in publications of a similar nature. It contained the views, most fearlessly expressed, of a young and vigorous set of thinkers on some of the most important subjects of the day connected with politics, religion, jurisprudence, and literature. The writers flew at all kinds of game:—nor was it difficult to see from the first (what was indeed obvious afterwards) that the politics of the Whig school gave a turn and colour to its whole character. "The Review," said Jeffrey, "has but two legs to stand on: Literature, no doubt, is one of them—but its right leg is Politics."

Sydney Smith was the editor of the first three numbers; and would, no doubt, have continued his editorial care had not his views of promotion in the Church called him away from Edinburgh to London. On his retirement Jeffrey took his place.

In 1801 Jeffrey married a relation of his own. In entering on the married state he must have had considerable reliance on Providence. Six months before he had told his brother that his profession had never yet brought him £100 a year. His wife died in 1805, to the deep grief of a heart keenly awake to domestic and kindly affections. In 1813 he married a grand-niece of John Wilkes, crossing to the United States to bring her home.

At the Bar he met with wonderful success, his sharpness and rapidity of insight giving him a formidable advantage in the detection of the weaknesses of a witness, and the vulnerable points of an opponent's case. In 1829 he was chosen Dean of the Faculty of Advocates. He now resigned the editorship of the Edinburgh, thinking that a judicial appointment of distinction was hardly to be held in conjunction with the editorship of a party review. When the Whigs came to power in 1831, he was made Lord Advocate, and entered Parliament as member for the Perth Burghs. After the passing of the Reform Act he was returned for Edinburgh.

In the House of Commons he could hardly be called a success, his mincing and affected tones and his metaphysical

WORDS OF THE WISE.

THEY seldom live well who think they shall live long.

HE must be a thorough fool who can learn nothing from his own folly.

EDUCATION is an ornament in prosperity and a refuge in adversity.

IN order to carve out a fortune one must be sharp.

THE best result to be derived from history is the enthusiasm it kindles.

EVEN the errors of woman spring from her faith in the good.

NOTES TO THE CALENDAR.

The following epigram, showing how summer came in winter, was suggested by an evening spent in company with the Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV. :—

"The Prince came in and said 'twas cold,

Then put to his head the rummer,
Till swallow after swallow came,
When he pronounced it summer."

4.—Gay, the poet, has had his character drawn by Pope in the following lines :—

"Of manners gentle, of affections mild,
In wit a man, simplicity a child;
With native humour tempering virtuous rage,

Formed to delight at once and lash the age;
Above temptation in a low estate,
And uncorrupted ev'n among the great;

A safe companion, and an easy friend,
Unblamed thro' life, lamented in his end.

These are thy honours! not that here thy bust
Is mix'd with heroes, or with kings thy dust;

But that the worthy and the good shall say,
Striking their pensive bosoms—Here lies Gay!"

5.—The delicacy of Mozart's ear was wonderful. He could distinguish the slightest difference in the pitch of sound; and every false or harsh tone, not softened by some concord, gave him exquisite pain.

He had an invincible horror at the sound of a trumpet, when not played in concert with other instruments.

His father imagined he might cure this dislike by sounding a trumpet in his presence, and tried the experiment, notwithstanding the child's entreaties; but at the first blast he became pale, and fell on the floor.

He was fond of playing on Schachner's violin, on account of the sweetness of its tone, and Schachner used to tune it, and leave it with him.

One day, when Schachner came to visit his father, Mozart remarked to him, that the last time he had tuned his violin, he had not kept it at its former pitch.

"It is half a quarter of a tone," he said, "lower than this one of mine."

They at first laughed at this extreme exactness; but the father, who had often observed the extraordinary delicacy of his son's ear, and his memory for sounds, desired him to bring Schachner's violin, and it actually proved to be half a quarter of a tone below the other.

13.—The peculiarities of Dr. Johnson's ponderous style are ridiculed in the following lines by Dr. Wileot—"Peter Pindar":—

"I own I like not Johnson's turgid style,
That gives an inch the importance of a mile;

Casts of manure a wagon-load around,
To raise a simple daisy from the ground;

Uplifts the club of Hercules—for what?
To crush a butterfly, or brain a gnat.

*"Creates a whirlwind from the earth
to draw
A goose's feather, or exalt a straw;
Sets wheels on wheels in motion—
such a clatter
To force up one poor nipperkin of water;
Bids ocean labour with tremendous roar,
To heave a cockle-shell upon the shore.
Alike in every theme his pompous
art,
Heaven's awful thunder, or a rumbling cart!"*

16.—Jean Tritheme fell a victim to the barbarity of the age in which he lived. He left in France several monuments of his erudition. His "Traité de Stéganographie," namely, several forms of writing in numbers, is a most laborious and ingenious work. For composing the same he was accused by bigots of magic, and sentenced to be burnt.

24.—William Makepeace Thackeray, one of the greatest of English novelists, was born at Calcutta on the 18th of July, 1811. Both his father and grandfather had been Indian civil servants. In 1832 he came of age, and inherited a sum amounting to about five hundred a year. The money was soon lost—some in an Indian bank, some in two newspapers. The loss of his patrimony must, however, be looked on as a fortunate thing for the reading public.

25.—The "Twelve Days of Christmas," as the extent of its holidays, were proverbial; but among labourers, in some parts, the Christmas festivities did not end till Candlemas. Old Tusser, in his "Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry," would have the merriment end in six days; he begins January with this advice to the countryman:—

*"When Christmas is ended, bid feasting adieu,
Goe play the good husband, thy stock to renew.
Be mindful of rearing, in hope of a gaine,
Dane Profit shall give thee reward for thy paine."*

This was the recommendation of prudence tempered by kindness; a desire for diligence in the husbandman, with an allowance of reasonable pastime to sweeten his labour.

26.—St. Stephen's Day falls on the 26th December. There was formerly a widely prevalent dogma that it was good to bleed horses at this time of the year, and St. Stephen's Day was that chosen by most people for that purpose. On this day, also, blessings were implored upon pastures.

THE SNOW-SHOWER.

*"I saw fair Julia walk alone,
When feathered rain came softly
down;
'Twas Jove descending from his tower,
To court her in a silver shower.
A wanton flake flew on her breast,
As happy dove into its nest,
But rivalled by the whiteness there,
For grief dissolved into a tear,
And falling to her garment's hem,
To deck her waist, froze to a gem."*

reasoning being anything but acceptable, and those must have been disappointed who conceived that the editor of the Edinburgh Review must necessarily wield in Parliament an authority analogous to that of Burke, or other great literary men who have had influence in the councils of the nation.

In the spring of 1834 he was raised to the Bench as one of the judges of the Court of Session, assuming, according to the Scotch fashion, the honorary title of Lord Jeffrey. Amongst his brethren of the Bench he held a high position, although he often embarrassed a tedious advocate by too closely confining him to those points in the case respecting which Lord Jeffrey himself entertained doubt or desired information.

He died at Edinburgh on the 26th of January, 1850.

In person Lord Jeffrey was of low stature; but his figure, which he tried to set off to the best advantage, was elegant and well proportioned. His features were continually varying in expression, and were said to have baffled our best artists. The face was rather elongated, the chin deficient, the mouth well formed, with a mingled expression of determination, sentiment, and arch mockery. The eye was the most peculiar feature of the countenance: it was large and sparkling, but with a want of transparency.

It is as a critic that Lord Jeffrey will be longest remembered. "Great fluency and ease of diction, considerable command of illustration, a certain superficial warmth of imagination and moral sentiment, a natural tendency towards mocking and ridicule, and a sharp eye to discover any oddity or peculiarity of style or violation of the accepted canons of good taste, were what lent to his criticisms the kind of pungency and effectiveness they possessed."

Time has shown him, however, to have been often in the wrong. His prophecies with respect to Lord Byron were in no respect fulfilled, and his position as editor led him now and then into more than one unpleasant quarrel. Southey, Wordsworth, and Coleridge seldom spoke of him except in terms of hatred and contempt, and he was called on to fight a duel by Tom Moore, the song-writer, in 1806, partly through his clever application of a passage in Spenser to Tom Little's poems.

The duel came off at Chalk Farm. Fortunately, although the principals were in earnest, it came to an abrupt termination by the arrival of the police-officers before the signal for firing was given. It was stated at the time that the pistols were loaded only with blank cartridges.

The Edinburgh Review praised Scott for a time; but a cold notice of "Marmion" threw the future novelist into the arms of the Quarterly.

The greatest mistake Jeffrey ever made as a critic was as to Wordsworth, whose now famous "Excursion" he saluted with an article beginning "This will never do." Other critics, however, besides Jeffrey, have blundered in the same way. Howe, the author of "Douglas," could not see any merit in Burns. Ritson, too, whilst appreciating Burns as a poet generally, gave his opinion that his songs were a failure. "He does not," he says, "appear to his usual advantage in song."

Then there was Waller, who wrote of "Paradise Lost" on its first appearance: "The old blind schoolmaster, John Milton, hath published a tedious poem on the fall of man; if its length be not considered a merit, it has no other."

The history of the Edinburgh Review, even taken in connection with the errors into which it sometimes fell, is one of the most interesting pages in the annals of English literature. It was successful from the commencement, and in the space of six years the circulation had increased from 750 to about 9,000. In 1813 the number of each copy printed was 12,000 to 13,000. The radical changes both in opinion and statutes introduced by its influence at an early or later day were remarkable indeed. When it started, a thousand evils were in existence, which the talents of good and able men have since lessened or removed, and these efforts have been not a little assisted by the honest boldness of the writers in the Edinburgh Review.

THE FRIENDLY COUNSELLOR.

TRULY RICH.

HE is rich whose incomes more than his expenses; and he is poor whose expenses exceed his income.

ARTIFICE.

ARTIFICE is incompatible with courteous frankness of manner. Rochefoucauld has said that nothing so much prevents our being natural as the desire of appearing so.

SHOWING GRATITUDE.

THE only way we can evince our gratitude to our great Creator and Benefactor, for all that He has given us, is to be as useful as we can to His creatures, and "to love our neighbour as ourselves."

CONCORD AND DISCORD.

MICIPSA, when he was on his death-bed, called his sons, and caused them to write this sentence in golden letters—Concordia parva res crescunt, discordia magnæ dilabuntur—"By concord small things are increased, but by discord the greatest are overthrown."

ADVICE TO PARENTS.

LOVE not thy children too unequally; or, if thou dost, show it not, lest thou make the one proud, the other envious, and both foolish; if nature hath made a difference, it is the part of a tender parent to help the weakest. The trial is unfair where affection is the judge.

MEN AND WOMEN.

A MAN ought to know any language or science he learns, thoroughly; while a woman should know the same language or science so far as to enable her to sympathise in her husband's pleasures, and in those of his best friends.

SELF-SACRIFICE.

SOME good people seem to think that because self-sacrifice is a noble thing, everything in which self is sacrificed must be good and right. But our views of sacrifice, like all others, are often dim and confused. Sometimes self is sacrificed most when it appears to be giving up least, and vice versa.

BEAUTY.

IT is our duty to surround ourselves with what is beautiful. For what a man sees constantly he assimilates into himself and becomes influenced by it; and his first duty is to bring his soul as nearly into accord with the beauty of nature as may be possible. For the same reason, negatively, we should reject as much as possible what is gross and ugly.

DRAWBACKS.

HUMAN happiness has always its abatements: the brightest sunshine of success is not without a cloud.

WHAT IS HONOUR?

*Not to be captious, not unjustly fight;
'Tis to confess what's wrong, and do what's right.*

LONG LIFE.

HE lives long that lives well; and time misspent is not lived, but lost. Besides, God is better than His promise if He takes from him a long lease, and gives him a freehold of a better value.

AN ENVIABLE EPITAPH.

*Stop, reader, here, and reign to look
On one without a name,
Ne'er enter'd in the ample book
Of fortune or of fame.*

*Studios of peace, he hated strife;
Meek virtues fill'd his breast;
His coat of arms, "a spotless life,"
"An honest heart" his crest.*

*Quarter'd therewith was innocence;
And thus his motto ran:*

*"A conscience void of all offence
Before both God and man."*

*In the great day of wrath, tho' pride
Now scorns his pedigree,
Thousands shall wish they'd been allied*

To this great family.

VIRTUES AND VICES.

WE derive from nature no fault that may not become a virtue, no virtue that may not degenerate into a fault. Faults of the latter kind are the most difficult to cure.

FASHIONS.

*In words, as fashions, the same rule will hold,
Alike fantastic, if too new or old;
Be not the first by whom the new
are tried,
Nor yet the last to lay the old aside.*

POPE.

CHEERFULNESS.

BETWEEN levity and cheerfulness there is a wide distinction; and the mind which is most open to levity is frequently a stranger to cheerfulness.

AFRAID.

FEAR springs sometimes as well from want of judgment as from want of courage. All the dangers I have been in, I have looked upon without winking, with an open, sound, and entire sight. One must have courage to fear.—MONTAIGNE.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

*God made the country, and man
made the town.
What wonder, then, that health and virtue—gifts
That can alone make sweet the bitter draught
That life holds out to all—should most abound,
And least be threatened, in the fields and groves?*

COWPER.

DUTIES AND PLEASURES.

DUTIES are the education for eternity, which is endless duty. Our pleasures are in exact proportion to our duties.

AN EASY MIND.

THERE is no greater test of a man's regularity and easiness of conscience than his readiness to face the postman. Blessed is he who is made happy by the sound of a rat-tat! The good are eager for it; but the naughty tremble at the sound thereof.

PAST AND PRESENT.

WE look back upon the past, and sigh that we did not begin then; yet we let the present slip as we let the past before.

REMEMBRANCES.

"JOYFUL remembrances of wrong actions," says Jean Paul, "are their half repetitions, as repentant remembrances of good ones are their half abolishment."

TO YOUNG MEN.

PLUTARCH warns young men that it is well for go for light to another man's fire, but by no means to tarry by it, instead of kindling a torch of their own.

IN ARGUMENT.

CONTEST not a point merely because you are in the right and another in the wrong. Out of such contests spring dissensions and enmity.

VAIN REGRETS.

ALL men might be better reconciled to their fate, if they would recollect that there are two species of misfortune, at which we ought never to repine—viz., that which we can, and that which we cannot remedy; regret being, in the former case, unnecessary, in the latter unavailing.

SELF-CRITICISM.

THE man of great genius is the first person to discover his own faults, and the last to pardon them. "Of all the criticisms," observed Boileau one day, "which hurt me the most, are those which my own judgment makes on my own works."

STUPID PEOPLE.

THOSE persons who cannot find pleasure in trifles are generally wise in their own opinion, and fools in the opinion of the wise; they neglect the opportunity of amusement, without which the rugged road of life would be insufferably tedious.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

FOUR good mothers have given birth to four bad daughters:—Truth has produced hatred; Success, pride; Security, danger; and Familiarity, contempt. And, on the contrary, four bad mothers have produced as many good daughters, for Astronomy is the offspring of astrology; Chemistry, of alchemy; Freedom, of oppression; Patience, of long-suffering.

ODDS AND ENDS OF THOUGHT.

HEAVY TAXES.

THE taxes of State are more oppressive than the State taxes.

REFORMATION.

WE pretend to reform others, whilst we exhibit in our own persons examples of neglect, disorder, and revolt.

AN UNCERTAIN PERIOD.

EVERY man at some period of his life is an egregious fool, but by a wise dispensation of Providence no man knows exactly when that time is.

TIME.

TIME is painted with a lock before, and bald behind; signifying thereby that we must take time (as we say) by the forelock, for when it is once passed there is no recalling it.

UNWISE CONTEMPT.

OF unwise admiration much may be hoped, for much good is really in it; but unwise contempt is itself a negation, nothing comes of it, for it is nothing.

WEAK POINTS.

Do you wish to find out any one's weak points? Note the failings he has the quickest eye for in others. They may not be the failings he is himself conscious of, but they will be their next-door neighbours. No one keeps such a jealous look-out as a rival.

CONSCIENCE.

EVERY man has within the depths of his heart a tribunal by which he begins to judge himself, awaiting the hour when the Supreme Arbitrator shall confirm the sentence. Thus does conscience furnish another proof of the immortality of the soul.

STUPIDITY.

WHAT is called stupidity springs not at all from mere want of understanding, but from the fact that the free use of a man's understanding is hindered by some definite vice: frivolity, envy, dissipation, covetousness, all these are the darling vices of fallen man—these are at the bottom of what we name stupidity.

UNENDING INFLUENCE.

WE know not what we are any more than what we shall be. It is a high and solemn, almost awful thought for everyone that his earthly influence which has had a commencement will never, through all ages, even were he the meanest of us, have an end.

WISE COUNSEL.

LET not anyone be querulous even in pain; let him not injure another in deed or in thought; let him not utter a word by which his fellow-creatures may suffer uneasiness, since that will obstruct his own progress to beatitude.

THE HAPPY STATE.

*How the best state to know?—It is found out,
Like the best woman—that least talked about.*

FORGIVENESS.

FORGIVENESS is better than revenge, for forgiveness is the sign of a gentle nature, but revenge is the sign of a savage nature.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

*What is earth, sexton?—A place to dig graves.
What is earth, rich man?—A place to work slaves.
What is earth, grey-beard?—A place to grow old.
What is earth, miser?—A place to dig gold.
What is earth, school-boy?—A place for my play.
What is earth, maiden?—A place to be gay.
What is earth, seamstress?—A place where I weep.
What is earth, sluggard?—A good place to sleep.
What is earth, soldier?—A place for a battle.
What is earth, herdsman?—A place to raise cattle.
What is earth, widow?—A place of true sorrow.
What is earth, tradesman?—I'll tell you to-morrow.
What is earth, sick man?—'Tis nothing to me.
What is earth, sailor?—My home is the sea.
What is earth, statesman?—A place to win fame.
What is earth, author?—I'll write there my name.
What is earth, monarch?—For my realm 'tis given.
What is earth, Christian?—The gateway of Heaven.*

THE PASSIONS.

THE passions are in some degree at the mercy of the thoughts, as are the thoughts of the passions. It is a moral duty, therefore, to think rightly.

CONFIDENCE.

*Let us be like the bird, one instant lighted
Upon a twig that swings;
He feels it yield, but sings on, unaffrighted,
Knowing he has his wings.*

UNDER OBLIGATIONS.

THERE are minds so impatient of inferiority that their gratitude is a species of revenge, and they return benefits, not because recompense is a pleasure, but because obligation is a pain.

THE FATE OF ALL.

*To death man is doom'd by the order of Nature,
And like him all around him must die.
Nay, if they should remain, he, poor perishing creature,
To the earth must return, in her bosom to lie.*

AFFECTATION.

MEN are never so ridiculous for the qualities they have as for those they affect to have.

A SECRET OF SUCCESS.

COMPLAINING of adverse fortune keeps fortune adverse. A happy disposition to improve opportunities, sooner or later, I believe, never fails of success.

TRUE LOVE.

THE first symptom of true love in a young man is timidity, in a girl it is boldness. The two sexes have a tendency to approach, and each assumes the qualities of the other.

HUMAN NATURE.

WE live on resolutions instead of performances, and content ourselves with the ease of the present in the confidence of future exertion. We condemn the omission of others, and overlook our own.

COUNT THE COST.

LET us not envy some men their accumulated riches; their burden would be too heavy for us. We could not sacrifice, as they do, health, honour, quiet, and conscience to obtain them. It is to pay so dear for them that the bargain is a "loss."

PLEASANT THOUGHTS.

'TIS a great sign of mediocrity to be always reserved in praise. When thou wishest to give thyself delight, think of the excellences of those who live with thee; for instance, of the energy of one, the modesty of another, the liberal kindness of a third.

OUR OWN DOMAIN.

WE possess each the sovereignty of ourselves—the noblest and most profitable field in which to exercise dominion, but we busy ourselves most in what least concerns us. We make ourselves slaves where we might be kings, and seek for power where it profits us nothing.

WOMEN'S FRIENDSHIP.

FRIENDSHIP soon springs up between women; a smile, a word, a nothing is enough to bring about amicable ties; but then they are, generally speaking, mere bows of ribbon, which leads to the saying that women do not really love one another.

ENOUGH.

THE man who has saved enough to dwell comfortably, to dress decently, to eat and drink well, and to have a spare shilling or so for books and other simple luxuries, and who has so placed his money that he can be certain no unforeseen misfortune will prevent him enjoying these comforts to the end of his days, is about as rich as any philosophical man of the world should desire to be. To pile up millions is also to pile up care for the keeping of them.

LAW SITTINGS, ECLIPSES, AND MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION.

INTEREST TABLE.

Without giving an elaborate series of tabulated figures to ascertain the interest due on any given sum at 2, 3, 5, or any other rate per cent., any person may calculate for himself the amount of interest by a very simple process.

The amount of interest upon one pound for every month at 5 per cent. is one penny. Having ascertained what any given sum amounts to at 5 per cent., other rates may be calculated by adding to, or dividing it, thus: 6 months. 5 percent. for £80 would be £2 0 0

2½ per cent., which is one-half 1 0 0
3 per cent. is six-tenths .. 1 4 0
3½ per cent. is seven-tenths 1 8 0
4 per cent. is four-fifths .. 1 12 0

If the interest should be more than 5 per cent., then the extra rate of interest must be added. Thus for 6½ per cent. add one-fourth; for 7½ per cent. add one-half.

CARMENT'S DIRECTORY.

In sending forth the Seventh Annual Issue of CARMENT'S DIRECTORY, with all the advantages of the former publications, we have to thank those friends and correspondents who are ever ready to assist us. It is gratifying to know that the support given the Edition of 1889 was fully maintained during this year—the Annual enjoying a much larger circulation than any other publication in the District.

Notwithstanding the ever-increasing claims of a business to attend to, it is hoped that the present Directory will be found no less accurate than formerly. As far as possible changes taking place till within the last few days have been attended to—the Dalkeith Names, especially, being corrected up till an hour or two preceding publication.—T. K.

DALKEITH, 3 p.m., December 29, 1890.

LIST OF THE PRINCIPAL FAIRS IN SCOTLAND.

 The Editor of Carment's Directory will feel obliged by notice of alterations in the date of any of the following Fairs being transmitted him for correction in future publications, and begs to state that, whilst doing his utmost to keep the List of Fairs correct, he cannot guarantee its absolute accuracy.

Fairs marked a mentioned only in January are continued each Month throughout the year.

WALKS IN PALESTINE.

THE letterpress by HENRY A. HARPER, Author of "Illustrated Letters to my Children from the Holy Land," etc. Illustrated by twenty-four Photogravures from Photographs taken by C. V. SHADBOLT. Royal 4to, size of page 12½ by 10 inches. 25s. bevelled boards, gilt edges.

"We have nothing but praise for the illustrations of this volume. It would be impossible to have anything better. The eye of an artist has evidently been employed to bring out to the utmost advantage all the capacities of the camera, while the reproduction by the process of photogravure leaves nothing that can be desired."—Spectator.

"A splendid gift-book. Whether we regard the volume as a work of art, or as an aid to study, it is equally to be commended."—Western Daily Press.

"The text is interesting, and the photographs are of very exceptional merit as photographs, quite apart from their subject."—Manchester Guardian.

THE LANDS OF SCRIPTURE.

Illustrated by Pen and Pencil.

Containing "Those Holy Fields" and "The Land of the Pharaohs," by the Rev. S. MANNING, LL.D.; and "Pictures from Bible Lands," by the Rev. S. G. GREEN, D.D. Imperial 8vo. 21s. handsomely bound in cloth, gilt.

This elegantly bound and profusely illustrated volume forms a very suitable Presentation Book to a Minister, Sunday-school Superintendent, or Teacher. It gives, in a concise and interesting form, a large amount of information about the places mentioned in Scripture, such as would prove of great service to every Bible Student.

HALF A GUINEA.

By Dr. MACAULAY, Author of "Sea Pictures," "Luther Anecdotes," "Gordon Anecdotes," etc. With Five Portraits of the Queen, and Sixty Engravings by Edward Whymper and others. 10s. 6d. cloth, gilt edges.

"The author's endeavour has been to recall those qualities in the personal character of the Queen and the incidents in her life which have most endeared her to her people."—Illustrated London News.

"Dr. Macaulay, with his practised pen, tells the story well, with just as much reference to history as the circumstances require."—Spectator.

THE CORPORATION OF THE SCOTTISH PROVIDENT INSTITUTION

(FOUNDED 1837).

HEAD OFFICE: 6 ST. ANDREW SQUARE, EDINBURGH.

— — — — —

This Society combines the advantages of Mutual Assurance with Moderate Premiums.

THE PREMIUMS are so moderate that, at usual ages for Assurance, £1200 or £1250 may be secured from the first for the same yearly payment which in most offices would generally be charged (with profits) for £1000 only—the difference being equivalent to an immediate and certain Bonus of 20 to 25 per cent.

The WHOLE PROFITS go to the Policyholders, on a system at once safe and equitable, —no share being given to those by whose early death there is a loss. Large additions have thus been, and will be, made to the policies of those who participate, notwithstanding the lowness of the premiums.

The SURPLUS at last Investigation was £1,051,035, which, after reserving one-third, was divided among 9384 Policies entitled to participate. First shares (with a few unimportant exceptions) ranged from 18 or 20 to 34 per cent, according to age and class. Other policies were increased in all 50 and 80 per cent.

N.B.—It is to be borne in mind that had the higher premiums usually charged been paid, not only would the original assurance have been greater, but the amount of bonus additions would have been correspondingly larger.

Examples of Premiums for £100 at Death—with Profits.

AGE.	25	30*	35	40†	45	50	55
During Life	£1 18 0	£2 1 6	£2 6 10	£2 14 9	£3 5 9	£4 1 7	£5 1 11
21 Payments.	2 12 6	2 15 4	3 0 2	3 7 5	3 17 6	4 12 1	5 10 2

* A person of 30 may secure £1000 at death by a yearly payment, during life, of £20:15s., which would generally secure (with profits) £800 only. Or he may secure £1000 by 21 payments of £27:13s.4.

† At age 40 the Premium ceasing at 60 is, for £100, £33:14s.2, being about the same as most Offices require during life. Before these Premiums ceased the Policy would share in at least one division of Profits.

ACCUMULATED FUNDS exceed 7½ MILLIONS.

Their INCREASE in last Septennium was greater than in any other office in the Kingdom —due in large measure to systematic economy of management, the ratio of expenses over the same period having been under 10 per cent of premiums.

Arrangements as to SURRENDER, NON-FORFEITURE, LOANS ON POLICIES (within their value), EARLY PAYMENT OF CLAIMS, &c., are specially liberal. Policies, as a rule, are WORLD-WIDE after five years—provided the assured has attained the age of 30.

REPORTS with full information may be had on application.
